BOOK SYNOPSIS

An irresistible contemporary romance about a not-so-humble cop who splits his raffle ticket with an unlucky waitress and the actor who falls in love with her. Allie Laurel Gray never wins anything. That's why she's shocked when a police officer returns with a winning raffle ticket to have lunch with baseball player Anthony Green and actors Mark Dubois and Beau Aikin. The prize includes a night at a hotel and since Allie's apartment is being fumigated—again!—she agrees to go. Besides, who wouldn't want to have lunch with three beautiful men? Overwhelmed and a bit intimidated by the guys, Allie tries to keep a low profile. But Mark DuBois will not let her slip by unnoticed—in fact, he notices everything about her and Allie is quickly charmed by his gentle kindness. Luck, especially Allie's luck, can't hold on forever and she's soon forced to make a choice between her heart and saving Mark's reputation so he can gain custody of his daughter. Winning the lottery was easy compared to winning at love.
